

Body Image

Visitors distort a mirror from convex to concave which in turn presents them with a series of self images from over weight to under weight.
Visitors can adjust the mirror until they find a point that most closely resembles their view of themselves and then check a reference scale (located on the side of the exhibit) to see if they have over estimated or under estimated their weight.

Prototyped while working as part of the Ontario Science Centre exhibit development Team for Human Body.

www.exhibiteers.com